Would you want to recruit you?

By Tracy Biller – producer of the Ultimate Success CDs

Over the past couple of months, I’ve received some wonderful emails from a network marketer named Bob Gallo. Bob lives in Milwaukie, Oregon. (FYI – Bob was an “honorable mention” in the recent essay contest!) In the emails he’s sent me and in the phone conversations we’ve had, Bob has provided keen insight to my trainings and observations on the industry.

Recently Bob sent me an email that suggested a topic for a newsletter titled, “Based on your success, would you want to recruit you?”

To make sure I understood exactly what Bob was suggesting, I emailed him back and asked this question: Is the objective of the question "would you want to recruit you?" to get people to honestly appraise what they’ve accomplished and/or where they are at in their network marketing career?

Bob wrote back, “THAT’S EXACTLY WHAT I MEAN!”

The 10 Factors For Guaranteed Network Marketing Success

Four years ago I wrote and recorded a report titled “The 10 Factors For Guaranteed Network Marketing Success.” The contents of that report are irrefutable.

If you haven’t heard the audio and/or read the transcript of the “10 Factors” report then click HERE. The report is FREE!!!

What I wrote four years ago in the report could have been applied by network marketers who were in the business 10, 20, or 30+ years ago. What I wrote four years ago in the report can be applied by network marketers 5 years, 10 years, even 20+ years from now.

Those 10 factors are constant. They are everything. If you want to succeed in this industry in a big way, then the 10 factors must be in place.

Be honest with yourself.

The 10th factor is “Be honest with yourself.” Although it’s listed as the 10th factor, it’s the single most important one. Very few network marketers are 100% honest with what they have done and/or where they are at with their network marketing business. Because they are not totally honest with themselves, it’s easy for them to make excuses as to why they haven’t experienced the success they desire.

Would you want to recruit you?

Bob Gallo suggested the topic of this newsletter, that being the question, “Would you want to recruit you?”

Looking back at my first 4-1/2 years in the business and answer that question honestly, the answer is, “No. I would not have wanted to recruit myself.” The reason is because I did not know how to play the game of network marketing.

Would I want to recruit myself after I learned how to play the game of network marketing? The answer is, “Absolutely! I want to find as many people like me as possible!”

So the question you should ask yourself is this:

Based on what you’ve accomplished in network marketing . . .
Based on the work habits and ethic . . .
Based on your communication skills . . .
Based on your level of self-motivation . . .
Based on your level of staying focused . . .
Based on your teachability . . .
Based on your study habits . . .
Based on your knowledge of persuasion . . .
and more . . .
